

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN A CAREER IN THE International Development and Humanitarian Field?

If so, come learn about the Master's in Development Practice (MDP) program at Emory University!

MDP is an INNOVATIVE TWO-YEAR PROGRAM that integrates interdisciplinary curriculum with hands-on training in professional competencies.

The MDP program bridges development theory and practice by engaging students in FIELD PRACTICUM experiences in the Global South. Students spend two summers working with partner organizations in their projects around the world. Global partners include CARE, the Carter Center, The Nature Conservancy, Save the Children, Habitat for Humanity, UNICEF, and many others.

MDP students have the opportunity to PERSONALIZE THEIR EDUCATION by pursuing a concentration in areas such as global health, gender and development, sustainable livelihoods and environments, water and sanitation, social enterprise, human rights, and monitoring & evaluation.

Visit our website to learn more about our program, curriculum, student body, partner organizations, and field practicum experiences.
